

MAKES PLEA FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS

By Giving Her Ballot It Will Make Her Association of Man in Culture Instead of Being Associate in Sin.

Closing services in celebration of the Jewish New Year were held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the Temple Beth-El. The final services were elaborate and most impressive, the altar being tastily decorated, and the music of the Schlesinger service being exceptionally well rendered. The cornet obligato, simulant of the ancient ram's horn, which used to be blown on this occasion, was also very well rendered.

During the service Rabbi Cronbach delivered a forcible address, using for his theme, "Another Year." He dwelt mainly on the events of the past year in the world at large, referring to the persistency of war in the world in spite of such forces as "The Hague" and various treaties in our state departments making for peace.

Speaking of woman suffrage in the course of his talk, the Rabbi said, "Let us not be deceived; woman ought to vote. Yet the reasons why they ought to vote are not necessarily the reasons usually advanced in the course of discussion." He further said that the women already, through their influence on public opinion, have considerable weight in the making and enforcing of laws, and that the real advantage of suffrage would be that it might increase the scope of things in which women are interested. The result might be to make the women better companions for men. "Make the woman the man's associate," he said, "in the ways of culture, commerce and politics, and you reduce the dreadful likelihood that she will be his associate in the ways of sin."

WHO LAUGHS LAST

BY BERTON BRALEY.
The tramp looked on at the cavalcade As the King went by in his gilt and braid;

And he gazed and said, with a heavy sigh,
"That chap is certainly living high;

"With all that a fellow would want to drink
And servants jumping at every wink.

"And plenty of money and grub—I see
That a King is a fine old thing to be!"

Then a soldier thrust the tramp aside
As the King went on in his purple pride!

Time passed—and the mighty King
Lay dead
And the soldiers marched with a measured tread,

And the tramp stood watching the cavalcade
As the dead King passed and the dead march played;

And he said "Poor fellow, his game is done,
He's finished his drinks and had his fun;

"The music'll play and the wine will flow
And the dancers dance—but He won't know.

"And the sun will shine and the breeze'll sigh
And color and life will greet the eye,

"And jewels will sparkle and birds will sing,
But he won't know—that poor dead King.

"He'll just lie there in a coffin grim—
And I'm the fellow who envied him!

"Envied him—that poor dead day,
And I've got life and the light o' day.

"And grub—to rustle, and drink—to get;
And a lot of adventures I haven't met.

"And many women and many men
To find in places I haven't been;
"A live tramp isn't so much," he said,
"But he's got the bulge on a King who's dead."

As the bier went by he raised his cap
And whispered, smiling, "Good-bye, old chap,

"I'm sorry for you!" and off he strode,
Humming a song down the dusty road.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 3. — Superior Judge John E. Humphries Thursday sent Twelve Men and six women to the county jail for contempt of court in defying him in his decisions against socialists.

Later a consultation of other judges of the superior court was held and Thorwald Steffert, an attorney who previously had complained to the Bar association of Judge Humphries' excessive use of the writ of injunction, was requested to apply for a writ of habeas corpus for the prisoners.
